One of a series of six selected walks which start and finish at stations on the Talyllyn Railway

Dysynni Gorge Walk

Leave Abergynolwyn Station and, after a short stretch of road, you are soon walking along a steep gorge defined by the Afon Dysynni, which squeezes through this narrow gap before reaching Dyffryn Dysynni, where it turns south-west and heads for the sea. A very quiet lane is then joined at Pont Ystumanner and this is followed for a short way to Llanllwyda, with the craggy hulk of Bird Rock directly ahead. You then turn left to start your return, initially climbing steadily and then more steeply, amidst surroundings which seem remarkably remote. Your climb ends at Rhiwerfa, where you turn left and begin a fairly steep descent through woods and down to the road. Opposite, just across the valley, is the Talyllyn Railway. You then return along the main road to Abergynolwyn Station. The total distance is about 5 miles. Allow about 4 hours.

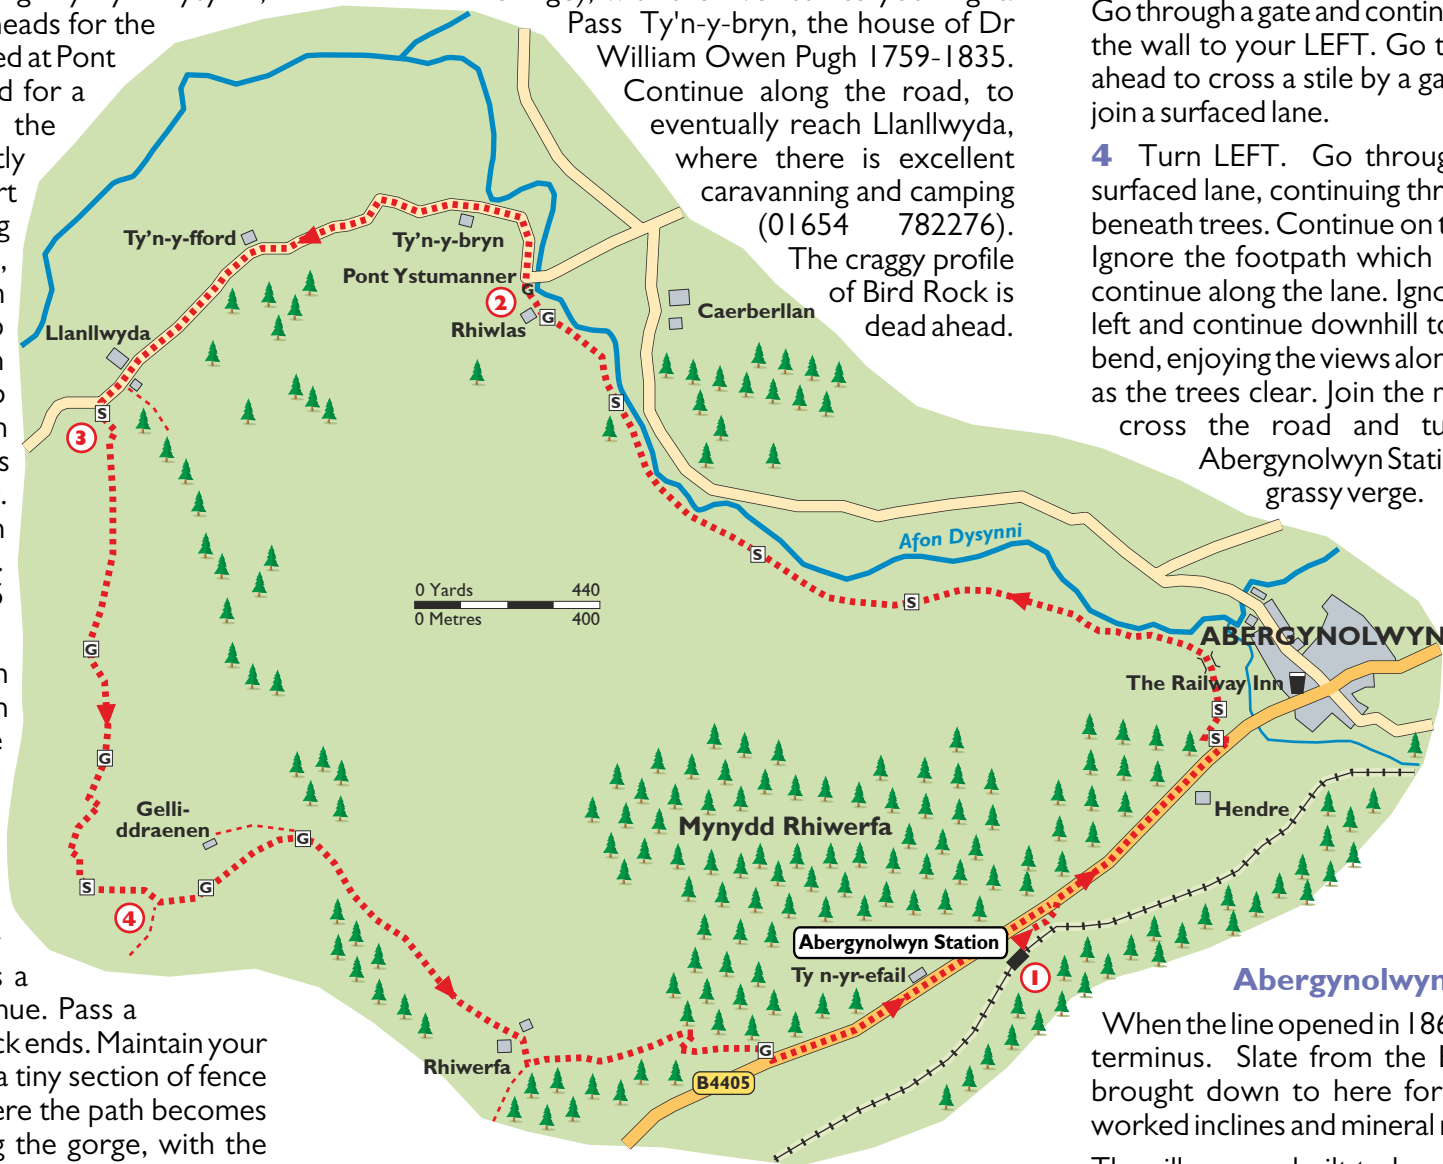

1 Leave Abergynolwyn Station and walk down to the road. Turn RIGHT and walk along the verge until you see a footpath sign on the LEFT-HAND side, as you are approaching Abergynolwyn. Carefully cross the road and walk up the track as directed for about 15 yards, cross a stile and follow the track to the RIGHT. Cross a ladder stile by a gate and continue. Pass a house to the right as the clear track ends. Maintain your direction across a field towards a tiny section of fence over an equally small stream. Here the path becomes clearly defined - continue along the gorge, with the Dysynni to your right. Cross a ladder stile and continue, with the river now well below you on the right. The views here are superb. Cross a stile and continue, to reach another stile. Cross this and continue. Eventually the path descends and joins the river. Pass a gate and stile by a broken fence and keep to the path. Go through the RIGHT-HAND gate by Rhiwlas and then descend along the track to join a minor road through a gate.

2 Continue AHEAD along the road (DON'T cross the bridge), with the river still to your right. Pass Ty'n-y-bryn, the house of Dr William Owen Pugh 1759-1835. Continue along the road, to eventually reach Llanllwyda, where there is excellent caravanning and camping (01654 782276). The craggy profile of Bird Rock is dead ahead.

3 As the road bends to the right, turn LEFT over the signed ladder stile and climb to join a green track, which continues uphill beside a stonewall on the left. Follow this up to a gate, go through and continue, curving initially to the left and then around the hill to the right. Go through a gate and continue ahead. Look for a gap in the wall to your LEFT. Go through this and continue ahead to cross a stile by a gate. Now follow a track to join a surfaced lane.

4 Turn LEFT. Go through a gate and follow the surfaced lane, continuing through another gate and on beneath trees. Continue on the lane, passing Rhiwerfa. Ignore the footpath which beckons to the right and continue along the lane. Ignore the forest track on the left and continue downhill to descend a very steep 'S' bend, enjoying the views along the valley which open up as the trees clear. Join the main road through a gate, cross the road and turn LEFT to return to Abergynolwyn Station, walking along the wide grassy verge.

This route was found to be open when it was checked. However, things do change, so be prepared for this, and allow plenty of time.
Always follow the Country Code and remember, this is sheep country: if you take your dog ALWAYS KEEP IT ON A LEAD!

Abergynolwyn Station

When the line opened in 1865, Abergynolwyn was the terminus. Slate from the Bryn Eglwys Quarry was brought down to here for transportation by cable worked inclines and mineral railway.

The village was built to house workers in the quarry. When work ended here in 1946, the railway's owner pledged to keep the line open for as long as he lived.
